NOVA SCOTIA MUSEUM

Frederick Scott, Museum Assistant

INTRODUCTION

The ornithological collections of the Nova Scotia Museum have been acquired over the past 67 years, beginning under the curatorship of Harry Piers in 1899. Acquisitions prior to this date apparently cannot be documented, although it is probable that a small number of mounted specimens without data, attributed to Andrew Downs, were received by Piers' predecessor, Dr. Honeyman.

Accessions were random and sporadic between 1900 and 1941, there being no concerted attempt to make a systematic or comprehensive collection of Nova Scotian avifauna. In spite of this, the representation at the end of Harry Piers' tenure was respectable in quantity, though stressing wandering visitors and rare species at the expense of the common or indigenous ones. All of these specimens were mounted for exhibition and it was not until 1950, when Lloyd Duncanson joined the Museum staff, that a collection of study skins was begun. Most of the study skins at present in the collection were collected and prepared by Mr. Duncanson; the remainder were done by Austin L. Rand and Victor Gould. Other consistent contributors have been E. C. Allen, W. Lent, W. J. Mills and Robie Tufts.

An important donation to the Museum was the Austin Rand collection, received three years ago. This was predominantly Nova Scotian in content, with a small number of specimens from other North American localities.

In 1950 the Museum purchased the Robie Tufts egg collection, consisting of 355 sets assembled by Mr. Tufts over a 55 year period and including a large proportion of Nova Scotian species as well as specimens from Quebec, Western Canada, and the Eastern and Southwestern United States. About 35 North American collectors are represented.

PRESENT STATUS

As of March, 1967, the Museum's collections contain the following:

Birds: 666 catalogued specimens, of which 451 are study skins, 114 are mounted specimens, and 91 mounts which have been relaxed into study skins. The condition of the latter group is generally poor.

Eggs: 355 catalogued sets (the Tufts Collection).
