NOVA SCOTIA MUSEUM

Curatorial Reports

The Curatorial Reports of the Nova Scotia Museum contain information on the collections and the preliminary results of research projects carried out under the program of the museum. The reports may be cited in publications but their manuscript status should be clearly indicated.

Abstract

A synopsis of the land and freshwater mollusca of Nova Scotia was prepared from a review of published literature. A total of 104 species are included some of which are considered to be extinct and others in need of verification. An analysis of the county records is included as distribution tables.

INTRODUCTION

The land and freshwater molluscs, or non-marine molluscs as they are sometimes called, commonly occur in terrestrial and freshwater habitats in Nova Scotia. Animals included are the land snails and slugs, freshwater snails and freshwater mussels and clams. Aquatic snails and bivalves of saltmarshes and seashores are not included..

It is perhaps easily understood that studies of these animals in Nova Scotia have not been as frequent as studies of marine molluscs. The proximity of the sea, economic importance of the fisheries and marine aquaculture have provided more inducement to research workers. However, the land and freshwater molluscs have not been completely overlooked. Early collectors, particularly J. R. Willis, J. M. Jones and A. R. Campbell made important contributions. All of the early studies have been referred to in a general way by LaRocque (1953) in his catalogue of the recent mollusca of Canada. Since the Second World War several significant studies have been published including those of Ord and Watts (1949), MacMillan (1950), Moore (1962), Athearn and Clarke (1962) and Clarke and Meacham Rick (1963). These studies have provided detailed accounts either of certain groups of molluscs or of certain areas of the province. Also, there have been several applied studies relating to public health or wildlife management that have provided additional species records in recent years. In some cases specimens obtained during these studies were deposited at the Nova Scotia Museum and have been available for re-examination.

The purpose of this report is to provide a synopsis of the land and freshwater mollusc records in the published literature as a reference for future work. The only manuscript reports referred to are those in the Curatorial Report series of the Nova Scotia Museum, as these include some important records. It is recognized that some additional records exist in technical reports of other agencies and in university theses.

Records of some 104 species of freshwater prosobranchs, freshwater and land pulmonates and freshwater bivalves are included. Marine members of the prosobranch family Hydrobiidae and of the pulmonate family Ellobiidae are often included in lists of the land and freshwater mollusca. However, in Nova Scotia the three species involved, Hydrobia totteni Morrison, Melampus bidentatus Say and Ovatella myosotis (Drap.), are restricted to marine and brackish waters and have been omitted from this synopsis. Some introduced species such as Testacella haliotidea and Helix aspersa are probably now extinct in Nova Scotia and some other records of both native and introduced species need to be confirmed. An additional three species of gastropods are known to occur in Nova Scotia, namely Acella haldemani (Binney, 1867), Ferrissia rivularis (Say, 1817) and Limax maximus Linné, 1758, but these have not been included in the synopsis as the records have not yet been published.

The scientific names used in this synopsis are standardized as far as possible with Pilsbry (1939, 1946 and 1948), Kerney and Cameron (1979), Burch (1980) and Clarke (1981). The names of species in difficult genera, particularly within the Physidae and Succineidae, should be used with caution as these families have not been properly investigated in Nova Scotia.

TABLES OF DISTRIBUTION

The following tables of distribution are based upon those records in the synopsis which are for specific counties of Nova Scotia. Native species are shown as circles and introduced alien species are squares. Open circles or squares represent species that are either considered extinct or unconfirmed in Nova Scotia at the present time. The location of the 18 counties of Nova Scotia and of Sable Island are shown in the map (fig. 1).

Because of the lack of detailed information on the land and freshwater molluscs of Nova Scotia, the distribution information must be considered only as preliminary. Information in the collections of the Nova Scotia Museums and other museums will provide a better summary of distribution when published on 10km<sup>2</sup> maps.
