

Contributors

Aaron Higgins-Brake is in his first year of his M.A. in Classics. His paper was developed out of a presentation for Dr. Diamond's course on Plato on Love and Friendship. He intends to continue thinking about love and its principle in Plato and his successors.

Tanisha Chakma is in her last year of undergraduate studies in Classics and Chinese, and in her second year of reading Ancient Greek. As a hobby, Tanisha translates poems from and into various languages. She will begin her Masters at Dal in September, studying Ancient Greek literature.

Marybeth Osowski is in the fifth year of a Classics honours degree. Her paper was written for Dr. Hankey's CLAS 3016: Meetings Between Hellenism and the East to Philo the Jew. She is intrigued by how certain groups can manipulate culture and ethnicity to suit their own (often political) needs. She is also interested in examining the reception of those signifiers of culture and/or ethnicity by outside sources, and how that reception would color their historical sources.

Jacob Glover is in the first year of his M.A. in Classics. He wrote this paper for Dr. Emily Varto's graduate seminar on Thucydides. He is primarily interested in the intersection of rhetoric and ethics.

B.W.D. Heystee is in the 3rd year of his Master's Degree in Classics. He wrote his paper for Eli Diamond's Advanced Greek seminar. He just finished writing a thesis on Plato's Meno and Protagoras under the supervision of Eli Diamond. He hopes to continue work on Plato and ancient ethics.

Alanah Josey is an undergraduate in the Classics Department. She wrote this paper for Dr. Treiger's seminar on John of Damascius.

Daniel Heide is in the fifth year of a Classics Honours degree. His paper was written for Dr. Hankey's Meetings class of 2012-2013. He is interested in the creative encounter between Hellenism and Judaism.

Kevin Gaul is in the first year of his Masters degree in Classics, studying Latin literature. He initially composed his translation for performance at 2013's Pythian Games. Kevin will be returning to Dalhousie next year, where he will be undertaking thesis work on Horace.

Justin Singer is in his 2nd year of his Master's degree in Classics. In his thesis, he is focusing on epistemology and ontology of mathematical Platonism. He is fascinated by geometry and number theory both ancient and contemporary, and following the completion of his degree he will pursue further studies in advanced mathematics and computing.

Paul McGilvery, currently in the second year of an MA in Classics, is completing a thesis on the historiography of Photius' Bibliotheca. He translated these verses on a spur of the moment on Valentine's Day, 2014.

Bruce Russell is in the second year of his Master's degree in the Classics Department. His paper was written for Dr. Eli Diamond's seminar on Aristotle's Metaphysics. His chief areas of interest remain Beauty, Proportion and Truth.

Will Tilleczek is in the final year of his studies. His paper was written in fall 2012 for PHIL 3110, History of Ethics: Plato to Epicurus. Will believes that the alleged opposition between the care of self and care of other should be kept an open question, and hopes that this paper manages to play some small part in doing so.