

Contributors

Kira Chalupa (she/her)

Loves reading and books (almost) more than anything else. She has a Bachelor of Arts in Ancient & Medieval Studies and English from the University of Alberta and is currently an MLIS candidate (2020) at Dalhousie University. Kira is passionate about libraries and how they can best serve their communities. She also likes furry creatures, knitting, music, and other artsy things.

Nathan Hynes (he/him)

Has a Bachelor of Science in Computer Science and Pure Mathematics, a Bachelor of Education (Intermediate/Secondary), and a Diploma in Technology Education from Memorial University of Newfoundland. He is currently an MLIS candidate (2020) at Dalhousie University, with a particular interest in youth services and technology education within public and/or school libraries. An all-around geek, his hobbies include games (video, card, and board), TV, dogs, and crafting.

Nicole Marcoux (she/her)

Has an Honours BA in Russian Studies and is an MLIS candidate (2020) at Dalhousie University. She is committed to libraries of all kinds and equitable access to information and currently works with adult literacy programs and library services to incarcerated women. Her personal passions, like most librarians, include cats and knitting.

Ridley Thomas (he/him/they/them)

Has BA degrees in Studio Art and Art History from Florida State University with minors in Museum Studies and Environmental Science. He is currently an MLIS candidate (2020) at Dalhousie University with a particular interest in how public institutions such as libraries can use art and other creative programs to connect with communities. His personal passions include hiking, rocks & fossils, miniatures, costumes, cooking, crochet, and living things of all kinds.