

Community Partnerships as Pedagogy

Alicia F. Noreiga, John Colton, Janet Dyment, Mary Sweatman,
Gabrielle Donnelly (Acadia University)

Active community partnerships can be at the heart of experiential education and high-impact practices, and community-based education that communities value can foster long-term community partnerships. This workshop will engage participants in actively exploring Acadia's Community Development program's efforts toward reciprocity with community partnerships. We will share the why and what of community partnerships as pedagogy and, more importantly, the how. We will share lessons learned, strategies and practical advice to support asset-based approaches that connect and nourish community organizations, students, and post-secondary institutions.

References

Saltmarsh, J., Hartley, M., & Clayton, P. (2009). Democratic engagement white paper. Boston: New England Resource Center for Higher Education Publications.

Srinivas, T., Meenan, C. E., Drogin, E., & DePrince, A. P. (2015). Development of the Community Impact Scale Measuring Community Organization Perceptions of Partnership Benefits and Costs. Michigan Journal of Community Service Learning, 21(2), 5-21.

Sweatman, M., & Warner, A. (2020). A Model for Understanding the Processes, Characteristics, and the Community-Valued Development Outcomes of Community-University Partnerships. Michigan Journal of Community Service Learning, 26(1), 265-287.