

SARA SADDINGTON

WATCHING MY FATHER READ

a brittle page turns
fractures silence

I study your intervals

slow slide of glasses
eyes never diverting

I tip my face

only one of us is reading though I align my turning pages with yours